

Federal Energy Regulatory Commission guidelines state:

The use, widening, or extension of existing rights-of-way must be considered in locating proposed facilities.”

Dominion representatives say they would “Strongly prefer the pipeline route use existing rights-of-way, but that’s not always possible.”

Map of existing rights-of-way for consideration

Dominion could co-locate almost 100 percent of the Atlantic Coast Pipeline on existing rights-of-way, including its own high-voltage power lines, as well as interstate highways, railroads, and other gas lines. Currently not a single foot of the proposed route is co-located with existing rights-of-way!
